INTRODUCTORY

The Shippen-Burd family was one of the oldest and most socially distinguished of the Philadelphia of long ago, and the title of the Burd School for Girls helps to still keep alive the old Shippen-Burd name and memories.

Edward Shippen Burd was married to Eliza Howard Simms on August 20, 1810. He was the son of Edward Burd and Elizabeth Shippen Burd, who was the daughter of Chief Justice Edward Shippen.

The story of the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shippen Burd is a most pathetic one. They were the parents of eight children, all of whom, however, died in early life, the last one in 1845. Mr. Burd never rallied after the death of his last child and died on September 17, 1849. Mrs. Burd, thus left solitary in the old home, devoted her few remaining years to religious duties and works of charity, and under these conditions, in 1856, she began the foundation of the future Burd School for Orphan Girls. Mrs. Burd died on April 6, 1860, and left a large sum for the building and endowment of the Burd School at Sixty-third and Market Streets.

The school has recently sold this site and moved into new quarters at Forty-third and Baltimore Avenue, and it was deemed advisable by the Board of Trustees to dispose of the antique furniture and various bits of bric-a-brac that, in their judgment, could be better capitalized into a fund, the income of which would help provide for the higher education of some of the pupils.

Among the furniture and other articles to be sold may be mentioned the tapestry-covered set of French chairs and settee of the Louis XVI period. Farther on, we give a short account of one of the early pupils of the Burd School of this beautiful old set of furniture and its wonderful surroundings, and the respect and honor paid it on account of its association with the tragic name of Queen Marie Antoinette. The set represents the very best endeavors of the period, and its covering of tapestry of Beauvais is of the finest quality, the medallions being woven in "cameo" style. There are Dining Tables made of mahogany by Duncan Phyfe, and early American Chairs, Cabinets, Desks, Sideboards and Settees. A tall clock of English make is also here, a pair of Girandole convex mirrors and some French Furniture of the first years of the nineteenth century. The Porcelain includes a very unusual blue and white Dinner Service of Chinese Lowestoft, as well as one of early Meissen, commonly known as Dresden ware. Sheffield Plated ware, nowadays esteemed almost as valuable as solid silver, may be found, as well as such smaller pieces as a pair of eighteenth century English inlaid Knife Boxes, French Dressing Cases fitted with old Cut Glass and Silver-topped articles, Candlesticks and a host of early Victorian oddments.

It may be said, in conclusion, that it is seldom a collection of such undoubted authenticity or in such an untouched condition is offered for public sale.

THE MARIE ANTOINETTE SUITE

The following Statement as to the Marie Antoinette suite of furniture and its connection with the Burd family and the Burd School is made by a woman with whom I have been closely acquainted for more than fifteen years, and one who is of the highest personal integrity and character. This estimable woman was a pupil of the Burd School from 1856 to 1866, but shrinks from the use of her name in the advertisement of the sale of the Burd School effects. However, a verbatim copy of the above Statement has been duly executed and affirmation made thereto before a Notary Public by this woman and the Statement is in the possession of the American Art Association and will be presented to the purchaser of the suite in question.

Carl E. Grammer,
Rector of St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, and as such ex-officio president of the Board of Trustees of the Burd School.

"The Burd School occupied two of the six three-story houses which stood on the South side of Sansom Street between Ninth and and Tenth Streets, and in the parlor of one of them the Parochial School of St. Stephen's Church was held. This was supported by Mrs. Burd and we children attended the school. These houses were opposite the back of Mrs. Burd's home and gardens.

"Mrs. Burd's home stood on the south-west corner of Ninth and Chestnut Streets; it was very broad and low and built of brick, with large windows and a Colonial door with an arch-way of exquisite workmanship; the high white marble steps surrounded the door. She had a most wonderful garden, reaching a whole square in length, with stables in the rear. This garden had handsome statues placed here and there, beautiful trees and lovely flowers. The parlors of the house opened on a round hall. There were three winter parlors and two summer ones opening on her garden. All these rooms were well filled with beautiful furniture. We children were allowed to go into any of these rooms we pleased, except the summer parlor, in which was the suite of furniture which Mrs. Burd told us had once belonged to Marie Antoinette.

"Some time after this, when the Burd School was built at 63d and Market Streets, all of Mrs. Burd's valuable belongings were brought out to the school and I heard it said nothing new had to be bought in furnishings for the new buildings except bedroom furniture. Mrs. Burd's elegant antique furniture filled the whole main floor of the school. There was a room on either side of the main entrance hall kept as show rooms, which were filled with the choicest bits, and in one of the show rooms, the Library, was the suite of Marie Antoinette furniture. In this room there were also large cabinets built in the wall, with glass doors, which were filled from top to bottom with valuable pieces collected by Mrs. Burd and family while travelling abroad.

"The Rector of St. Stephen's Church, Dr. Ducachet, and Mrs. Burd were very particular and very careful of this Marie Antoinette furniture, which always seemed a puzzle to us children, as we thought some of the other furniture was prettier. Both Dr. Ducachet and Mrs. Burd would tell us about the Marie Antoinette furniture, but said that we would know more as we grew older, and they tried to make us understand how valuable it was and what care must be taken of it. Dr. Ducachet insisted that the Library be always kept locked and only opened to show visitors, and that rule held good as long as I was in the Institution.

"We had many visitors, for the Burd School in those days was one of the show places of Philadelphia, and everybody seemed anxious to see the Marie Antoinette furniture and went into ecstasies over it. I remember one time taking Mark Twain and a party of friends through the School."

The Association exercises great care to catalogue every lot correctly, and will give consideration to the opinion of any trustworthy expert to the effect that any lot has been incorrectly catalogued, and, in its judgment, may either sell the lot as catalogued or make mention of the opinion of such expert, who thereby would become responsible for such damage as might result were his opinion without proper foundation.
